

There would appear to be a concerted attack on the people who, like my wife and I, who have each worked, paid taxes, and done without to save for some enjoyment in our retirement years and at the same time not being too much of a burden on the rest of the country. In our case this has been [removed for privacy reasons] years in the workforce as taxpayers.

It would now seem that this current Government is hell bent on driving us all to be reliant on the government pension while opening up our Australian Company's to be more easily taken over by overseas interests. The latest two things I am referring to are:

- (1) the proposed changes to the Commonwealth Seniors Health Card; and
- (2) the mooted changes to the Imputation Credit System.

I am at a loss to understand the thinking that penalises those who through their hard work and sacrifice are seen as easy targets to prop up the incompetence of this Government.

Loyal workers are a great asset to Australia. Why not give them a fair go in their retirement?
