

We have a Self Managed Super Fund and we are writing to express our concerns about reports that the current Henry Tax Review is considering recommendations to change or remove the dividend imputation scheme. We feel strongly that retirees relying on dividend income, having created self supporting retirement savings, should not be penalised by the changes which are apparently being considered. We consider that a removal or change to the current scheme is unfair, inequitable, and unnecessary. We also support the choice and competition which SMSFs bring to Australia's superannuation system.

Regards

Viv and Victoria Dore