

To whom it may concern,

I am writing to voice my concerns over our current tax system, I have a number of concerns as follows;

In the last 10 years we have seen a number of party driven changes to tax brackets that have benefitted people in the top income brackets with little or no assistance to those in the lower pay scale. This should be reversed to allow the average Australian to live to the standard of living that Australia as a whole can be proud of. So we need to have less tax for people earning up to 80k PA and higher tax for those over 150k PA.

After doing some investigation I believe strongly that Australia should look at the CTDL to increase tax revenue without affecting small to medium business or increasing other business taxes.

Also in this current time of climate change it would be a very good idea to look at changing the vehicle tax system to look at rating the amount of tax to the amount of pollution or emissions that the vehicle creates, this will need to be looked at so as not to cripple the transport industry and should be phased in to allow small companies time to upgrade vehicles.

Regards,

Stephen Floyd